CUSTOMS HEADING 3004

Medicaments packaged for retail sale

Who, in the public sector, buys this family of goods, and how much of it each country imports.

105	22,605	19	USD 216bn
public buyers	goods notices	countries	imports in 2024 across them

> The join from a buyer's procurement code to a customs heading runs through crosswalks BuzzBaboon authored, because no official one exists, so it is approximate: a count is a product family, never a claim that a buyer bought one exact line.

How to read it

One page per country, ranked by the number of goods notices in the family. Each page gives four things.

The count line

Goods notices in the family in the window of that country's award record, and how many distinct public bodies issued them. Only notices the buyer classified as goods count.

The buyers

The ten most frequent buyers by number of notices, each with one example title as the buyer published it, in the language of the notice. Award values are never shown: the records carry framework ceilings, duplicates and typing errors that would mislead.

The bill

What the country imported of the family in 2024 and 2022, from the world trade record, and its three largest source countries with their shares.

The record

Which award record the counts come from, and the window it covers.

Counts are not comparable across records: a US count is contract actions including delivery orders, a European count is award notices in the EU journal. Compare buyers within a country; use the bill to compare countries.

A European count is contract award notices on Tenders Electronic Daily, the EU's journal, which carries the larger awards; smaller awards appear only in national portals. The join from a buyer's procurement code to a customs heading runs through crosswalks BuzzBaboon authored, because no official one exists, so it is approximate: a count is a product family, never a claim that a buyer bought one exact line.

The countries with no match

These records were read and hold no goods notice in this family in their window. A missing match can mean the buyers use a broad code the crosswalk does not tie to one heading (for medicines, the general pharmaceutical code), or that the purchases sit in a national portal rather than the record held.

Records too small to use

Fewer than 500 notices in the year: a few dozen notices would make a layer out of noise. Albania (8 notices in the year); Bosnia and Herzegovina (18 notices in the year); Georgia (9 notices in the year); Iceland (236 notices in the year); Kosovo (6 notices in the year); Liechtenstein (82 notices in the year); Moldova (70 notices in the year); Montenegro (29 notices in the year); North Macedonia (85 notices in the year); Serbia (41 notices in the year); Turkey (24 notices in the year); Ukraine (36 notices in the year).

No usable record is held for any other country. New Zealand publishes its awards behind a page a script cannot read; most other countries publish no open award record at all.

Method and limits

The join. The join from a buyer's procurement code to a customs heading runs through crosswalks BuzzBaboon authored, because no official one exists, so it is approximate: a count is a product family, never a claim that a buyer bought one exact line. The crosswalks map CPV (the EU and UK procurement vocabulary), PSC (US federal product codes), UNSPSC and GSIN (Canada and Australia) to customs headings. A notice joins only when its code matches a specific crosswalk key, never a broad division, and only when the buyer classified the purchase as goods.

Counting. Identical rows are counted once. US prime-vendor ledger rows are left out. Buyers are folded by name, case and punctuation; a body that publishes under two spellings counts twice.

Example titles. The most recent title from each buyer that passes the rails: none naming a company, so no supplier is ever shown; no courtesy title followed by a name; no email, phone or long reference number. Titles are the buyer's own words; a product brand in a title is the buyer's description of the purchase, not the supplier.

The bill. CEPII BACI, imports summed over the heading's in-scope six-digit lines, 2024 and 2022; sources are exporters' shares of the 2024 bill. It is what crossed the border, public and private buyers together.

What it does not say. Which company won any notice, what any award was worth, whether a buyer will buy again, or whether supplying it would pay. No employment figure appears. Nothing here is a forecast or a promise; it is a list of where to look.
